journal of high standing we take the following descriptions of a few of the spring fashious;

Among the prettiest of the spring scarfs is the "Reine Margarita." It is made of mazarine blue cashmere, with a circlet or oval of margarites at each end; the petals are white and the hearts yellow. The white and yellow are worked in floss silk, but may be worked in silver and gold thread. These latter, though more brilliant, are not so chaste, and consequently not so much in keeping with the name of scarf. When the margaritas describe an oval line, the two ends are joined at the lony of small and the long fringe which fimishes the ends is made of white and yellow silk, waved in imitation of young lamb's wool. It is tied at the throat in a slip-not, which is warm and confortable, and does not crush or wrinkle the scarf.

Another pretty novelty is the "Oakleaf Boa." This piquant little thing consists entirely of knitted leaves, strung on a knitted web two inches wide. It may be made in various shades, of yellow, blue, green, or violet. The original one in question was made of yellow, deepening into orange, and each leaf was tupped with a little bead of the lightest color, employed in the leaves.

"The Hungarian collar" is another of "The Hungarian collar" is another of an each the rein.

of the lightest color, employed in the leaves.

"The Hungarian collar" is another of the spring novelties, and one that cannot fail to become a favorite with the ladies. It may be ittached to any house, school, walking, or riding dress with which it will harmonize in color; and, that it may be the most serviceable, ladies who intend having hut one should get that made up in black velvet. The one for imitation consisted of a band of black velvet, two inches wide, lined with black silk. Between the lining and the outside, a piece of stiff linen was inserted to make the collar stand and the whole was quilted through in embroidery silich. It was inisisted of in front by a black velvet bow the same width as the collar.
